

To those it may concern,

It was a great pleasure that I offer my complete and unconditional support for Lei Wang for the Outstanding TA Award. My name is Tony Wu, an English teacher in Chaoyang Branch School affiliated Renmin University in Beijing, China, where Lei Wang worked for 3 years from July, 2014 until July 2017. I felt it a fortune to get acquainted and be friends with Lei Wang and we have continued to be in contact since she went to the US to pursue her academic goal.

Lei Wang was a school grade leader, headteacher of Class 3, as well as an English teacher of Class 3 and Class 4 during the 3 years' teaching in school. As a school grade leader, she sacrificed lots of personal time and devote to facilitating the entire students' academic achievements in Grade 8 and accommodate to different teachers' needs. As a headteacher, she was well versed in uniting the whole class to work together to achieve best and their class spirit was best shown in different activities. Her talent of leadership was also shown in her relationship with her students. She treated her students with care and love, which was part of the reason why her students trusted her and were willing to follow her instruction.

As an English teacher, she was keen on upgrading her educational theory and methodology. She went to teaching seminars and symposiums to keep pace with the frontier educational movement. She put what she had learned into practice by restructuring her teaching practice. Due to the innovative and practical teaching method, her students achieved significant academic gains. Lei Wang was also ardent in introducing her newly-acquired knowledge within our English department. She invited us fellow teachers to observe her classes and discussed with us about the cons and pros of the new teaching practice, which not only brought every teacher involved new ideas but also galvanized our impetus to be more acquisitive in learning new. What I am most impressed is her unwavering will and efficiency to execute her plan. It seemed to my acknowledgment to be a mission impossible, considering her situation, when she first unveiled her thought to me to study abroad, but she made it happen against all odds. I am confident that this spirit of hers ensures he will achieve any goal she sets.

In the end, I would like to re-express my full support for Lei Wang for the Outstanding TA Award, which I think he truly deserves.

Tony Wu
